“My interests lie in creating strong and reliable client relationships”.

Being part of a team who have provided people and culture services to their clients, and the community for over 13 years is an exciting opportunity.

With a background in customer service and a strong interest in finding out what motivates a person to be the best version of themselves in the workplace, I am more than thrilled to be the Recruitment Co-ordinator for Everest People.

My interests lie in creating a strong and reliable relationship with the client, to best find out what their needs are and how they can be met. Commitment and consistency are values that are important to me in all aspects of my life.

Working in client-based/customer-orientated roles over the past six years has given me the opportunity to apply these values and along with my strong communication skills I enjoy building strong effective client relationships.

Rachel's areas of interest include:

- I have come to understand that everyone thinks differently. I'm extremely interested in how that affects the recruitment process, and am keen to see how people's differences can be used to benefit both the clients and candidates. The Everest Team have years of knowledge and expertise on this matter and I am looking forward to being given more insight into this throughout my working journey.
- I value hard work, and developed both a strong work ethic and sense of resilience through working in the public sector. I believe that the work you put in comes back to you, and I look forward to being able to showcase this throughout my role at Everest.
- The psychology of recruitment is a real area of interest to me. I love finding out how experiences shape people, and look forward to using that knowledge to help people find their dream role.
